The business case for our HR management software

Welcome

First of all, thank you for your interest. We understand that choosing new software can be a complex and time-consuming process as well as a distraction from other day-to-day matters. And, because we believe in keeping things simple, we put together this guide to explain the business benefits of Breathe.

Of course, if you have any questions about anything in this guide, we'd be very pleased to speak with you or a member of your team. As you'd expect from a company that helps other businesses manage HR, we have a friendly, highly knowledgeable team who talk to you about your requirements and what we can do to meet these.

To contact us, please call 01403 288880
or email: onboarding@breathehr.com.

You can also talk to us via Intercom the chat box on our website: breathehr.com

All the best,

Jonathan Richards

Breathe in a nutshell

Breathe helps SMEs manage people-related functions and processes.

It's a self-service system that allows employees to report absences, request holidays, update personal information and more.

Managers and HR users control permission - setting tools to grant or restrict employee or client access to sensitive information. This is key to data and employee information security.

Features

- Holiday management
- Sickness & absence tracking
- Document storage
- Performance monitoring
- Training scheduling
- Expense management

Why use Breathe?

An HR system like Breathe helps businesses keep on top of day-to-day admin so they can spend less time on time-consuming manual processes.

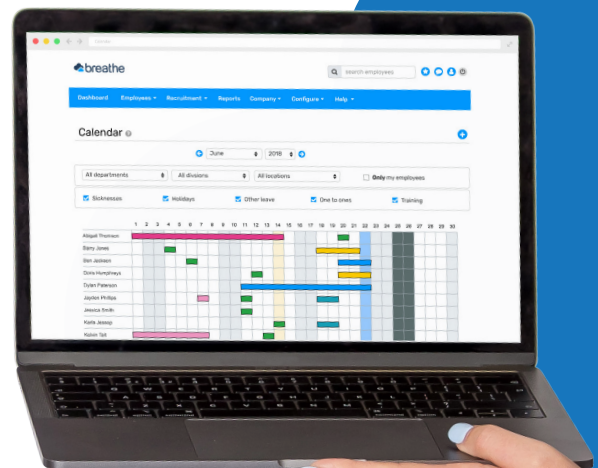

This includes calculating holiday allowances, recording employee absences and collating documents, so management has more time to focus on growth and development.

Using Breathe improves efficiency and visibility.

"If you are using paper or spreadsheets, drop them and use Breathe. For a small outlay each month you have a one stop shop to keep all information in one secure place as well as save yourself hours of time."

Cloud computing & security

As the benefits of storing information in the cloud increase in popularity, it's encouraging to see more and more SMEs adopting this model. When we launched Breathe, we chose to offer it as a cloud-based application so customers were not required to invest in new software servers or pay to increase the capacity of existing systems.

Many businesses benefit from the fact that subscribing to Breathe is treated as operational as opposed to a capital expense.

This provides major accountancy advantages. Simply consult your financial expert to see if this model will benefit your business. In most cases we've found that it does.

Your office anywhere

Because Breathe is hosted in the cloud, it's accessible anywhere with an internet connection. In a time when remote and home working are increasingly the norm, and where field-based employees need access to the same applications used by their office-based colleagues, this has never been so important.

All users can access Breathe via smartphones, tablets, laptops and PCs.

The safety and security of your employee data is our highest priority.

Breathe is hosted by Amazon Web Services in their state-of-the-art datacentres which are ISO 27001 certified. As an added precaution, we ourselves are ISO 27001 accredited, reflecting the commitment to security demonstrated by our working practices and data-handling expertise.

GDPR and Subject Access Request compliance

Employee data is subject to the same rules as the management of prospect and customer information. Since the 2018 introduction of the General Data Protection Regulations (GDPR), the Information Commissioner's Office (ICO) is already fining small businesses and charities for data infringements.

In May 2019, GDPR regulations were extended to cover Subject Access Requests (SARs), whereby an employee can request all information held by them by an employer.

Changes & your new responsibilities

A company's new responsibilities include:

- No fee unless the request is manifestly unfounded or excessive.
- 30 days (not 40) to respond, with an option to extend by up to 60 days in limited circumstances.
- A greater level of information to be supplied.
- SARs no longer have to be made in writing.

By centralising the storage of your clients' employee information, you can manage SARs quickly and thoroughly. And because we help to switch spreadsheets and filing cabinets for software Breathe can help you achieve GDPR compliance.

"We have recently achieved our Investors in People Accreditation and Breathe contributed significantly to this process."
